It hurts to write this review, because I love William Gibson. I have read six of his books now, and the Alien 3 of William Gibson, who gives life to Gibson's not produced guión for the movie in a graphic novel of five problems, is, with much, my least favorite of all . In the real alien 3 movie, the spectator is told at the beginning that Ripley is the survivor's only; Newt and Hicks, two of the main characters of the previous movie Aliens, are dead. Ripley continued being the central character of the movie, and it hurts to write this review, because I love William Gibson. I have read six of his books now, and the Alien 3 of William Gibson, who gives life to Gibson's not produced for the movie in a graceful novel of five problems, is, with much, my least favorite of all. In the real alien 3 movie, the spectator is told at the beginning that Ripley is the survivor's only; Newt and Hicks, two of the main characters of the previous movie Aliens, are dead. Ripley continued being the central character of the movie, since she is for the entire franchise, and with reason. Gibson takes the story in a very different direction in his guide, since Hicks and Newt survive. However, things fall apart very early in Gibson's interpretation when the reader discovers that, although I live, Ripley is in a coma. She will continue in a coma for the entire version of Gibson's movie, and she does not appear in history at all. This is, of course, completely ridiculous, since Ripley is one of the best female characters in the history of cinema; Writing an alien history, set just after a movie where she was the main character, who essentially writes it, is like writing a Terminator 2 guide that does not have Arnold Schwarzenegger. It is simply bad. Apart from that, this book was full of other problems. Some panels that Little after others in time they would be subtitled "soon." Why not write "little later ..." or something that does more? plus? The art of Hicks, Newt and Ripley didn't look anything like their actors and actresses in movies; This could be because none of them gave the approval of their likeness appear in this book, but Bishop looks pretty close to his actor in art... so it gives the appearance that some of the film actors were involved in this book and Some were not, or that art is simply not very good, or at least inconsistent. Facial expressions on some panels did not match what was happening on the panel. Two characters would be having a rather relaxed conversation, but for some reason one of them had a really grieved or stunned look on his face, as if something was terribly wrong. I couldn't even say what was going on in some panels; In one, the light and the bright lines indicated some kind of explosion that occurred behind a character, and yet in the next panel they were completely well, and there seemed to be no explosion. The dialogue in some panels also made no sense, and the unrelated scenes in totally separate places would appear just next to each other, resulting in a general sense of confusion and disorientation. Many books start well and crumbled near the end, but this actually, one falls apart at first, not only because Ripley is discarded but because history is painfully political and boring. I don't know how many times the arms reduction treaties and other boring political problems were discussed, but it was too often. For someone who is a self-proclaimed fanboy of the franchise, Gibson completely lost the mark with the content and tone of his version of the film; It is read as a Cold War thriller that is not exciting, which is a tone completely different from the two previous films. The end was alsoConfusing, but by then they already reviewed me, so that I really didn't care enough to try to decipher it. The back of the book has a sketchbook, which was quite "meh", "meh", s'rehcnf. s'noitcudorP eniwydnarB morf srecudorP eht dna xof yrutneC ht02 htiw "secnerreffid evitaerc" ot eud tcejorp eht denodnaba eh erofeb rehcnf divaD rotcerid denwoner yb detcerid saw taht 3 neilA eivom 2991 eht ni nees taht ot evitarran evitanretla naA Áwollof lliw taht skoob cimoc fo seires a gnitairp eb lliw yeht taht decnuonna yltnecer scimoC esroH kraDtnemmoC A ddAstnemmoC 7sdaeR 007.91 .emoh sih CB .revuocnaV sekam einnhof .noitartsull/ngiseD noitacinummoC ni AFB a gninrae .YN .nylkoorB ni etutitsnl ttarp eht fo etaudarg A .
